

i want to let homeless live on my land but the neighbors only said i can do it if they cannot leave. the neighbors want the penalty for leaving to be an arrest. what laws does this fall under?

What you're describing raises serious legal and ethical concerns, particularly regarding false imprisonment, unlawful detainment, and potential human rights violations.

Key Legal Issues

1. False Imprisonment (Criminal & Civil)

- If you keep someone on your land against their will or under threat of arrest, this could be considered false imprisonment, which is illegal in all U.S. states.
- False imprisonment is both a crime and a civil offense (you could be sued for damages).

2. Unlawful Detainment / Kidnapping

- If there is any use of force, threat, or coercion to prevent someone from leaving, kidnapping laws may apply, which are severe felony offenses.

3. Property Rights vs. Human Rights

- You can allow homeless individuals to live on your land, but they retain their full legal rights, including freedom of movement.
- Private citizens (including your neighbors) do not have the authority to make an arrest unless a crime is actually being committed (citizen's arrest laws vary by state).

4. Zoning & Housing Laws

- Depending on local laws, using your land for housing could be subject to zoning, health, and safety regulations.
- Some areas have laws against establishing informal shelters without proper permits.

Your Rights & Alternatives

- You can allow people to stay voluntarily, but you cannot make leaving illegal or penalize them.
- If you want to provide housing, check local zoning laws to see what is allowed.
- If the neighbors are pushing for an illegal arrangement, you should consult a lawyer and possibly report their suggestion to authorities.

Allowing individuals to reside on your property under the condition that they cannot leave, with penalties such as arrest for doing so, raises significant legal and ethical issues in California, particularly concerning false imprisonment and zoning regulations.

False Imprisonment Under California Law

Definition and Penalties:

- False imprisonment is defined as the unlawful violation of another person's personal liberty. This involves restraining, confining, or detaining someone without their consent and without legal authority.
LAW.JUSTIA.COM
- In California, false imprisonment can be classified as either a misdemeanor or a felony:
 - Misdemeanor: Punishable by a fine not exceeding $1,000, imprisonment in the county jail for up to one year, or both.
CODES.FINDLAW.COM
 - Felony: If the act involves violence, menace, fraud, or deceit, it is punishable by imprisonment pursuant to subdivision (h) of Section 1170.

Application to Your Situation:

- Imposing conditions that restrict individuals from leaving your property, coupled with the threat of arrest, could constitute false imprisonment, especially if these restrictions are enforced through coercion or threats.

Zoning and Housing Regulations in Anaheim

Short-Term Rentals (STRs):

- As of mid-2019, Anaheim updated its policies on short-term rentals, allowing existing permitted STRs to operate under strict regulations and good neighbor policies. However, the opening of entirely new STRs remains prohibited. ANAHEIM.NET

Accessory Dwelling Units (ADUs):

- Anaheim has specific ordinances governing the development of Accessory Dwelling Units. Property owners interested in adding ADUs must comply with local regulations, which may include restrictions on size, occupancy, and usage.

HCD.CA.GOV

Temporary Uses and Structures:

- The city permits certain temporary uses and structures, including special events, subject to compliance with specific provisions. However, these are typically short-term and may not encompass long-term housing solutions. CODELIBRARY.AMLEGAL.COM

Application to Your Situation:

- Allowing individuals to reside on your property may require adherence to Anaheim's zoning laws, permits, and regulations. Unauthorized use of property for residential purposes can result in legal penalties.

Recommendations

1. Consult Legal Counsel: Before proceeding, seek advice from an attorney experienced in California property and criminal law to ensure compliance with all legal requirements.
2. Engage with Local Authorities: Contact Anaheim's Planning and Building Department to understand the necessary permits and regulations for allowing individuals to reside on your property.

3. Consider Ethical Implications: Ensure that any arrangements respect the rights and freedoms of the individuals involved, avoiding any form of coercion or unlawful restriction.

By thoroughly understanding and adhering to California's legal framework and local Anaheim regulations, you can make informed decisions that are both lawful and ethical.

how does it apply to orange county?

Allowing homeless individuals to reside on your property in Orange County, California, involves navigating complex legal and ethical considerations, particularly concerning false imprisonment laws, zoning regulations, and property rights.

False Imprisonment Laws in California and Orange County

- Definition and Penalties:
 - Under California Penal Code § 236, false imprisonment is defined as unlawfully restraining, detaining, or confining a person against their will. SHOUSELAW.COM
 - This offense can be charged as either a misdemeanor or a felony:
 - Misdemeanor: Punishable by up to one year in county jail, a fine of up to $1,000, or both. KANNLAWOFFICE.COM
 - Felony: Punishable by imprisonment in county jail for 16 months, two years, or three years. KANNLAWOFFICE.COM
- Application to Your Situation:
 - Imposing conditions that restrict individuals from leaving your property, especially under threat of arrest, could constitute false imprisonment. Such actions are illegal and carry severe penalties, including potential felony charges.

Zoning Regulations in Orange County

- Residential Use and Zoning Codes:
 - Orange County's zoning regulations define and restrict land uses to ensure community safety and order. For instance, certain residential facilities, such as senior living facilities, are subject to specific classifications and standards.
OCDS.OCPUBLICWORKS.COM
- Accessory Dwelling Units (ADUs):
 - An ADU is a secondary housing unit on a single-family residential lot. Orange County permits ADUs under certain conditions, including compliance with size, occupancy, and safety standards. LIBRARY.MUNICODE.COM
- Temporary Use Permits:
 - Establishing temporary housing structures may require a Temporary Use Permit (TUP) from the county. These permits are subject to specific criteria and are typically limited in duration.

Property Rights and Ethical Considerations

- Freedom of Movement:
 - Individuals residing on your property retain their fundamental rights, including the freedom to come and go as they please. Any attempt to curtail this freedom could lead to legal actions against you.
- Neighbor Relations and Legal Boundaries:
 - While neighbors may express concerns about activities on your property, they cannot impose conditions that violate legal or ethical standards. It's essential to balance neighborhood harmony with adherence to the law and respect for individual rights.

Recommendations

1. Consult Legal Counsel:
 - Seek advice from an attorney experienced in California property and criminal law to ensure compliance with all legal requirements and to understand the potential risks involved.

2. Engage with Local Authorities:

- Contact the Orange County Planning Division or your local city planning department to inquire about necessary permits and regulations for allowing individuals to reside on your property.

3. Consider Ethical Alternatives:

- Collaborate with local non-profit organizations and social services that provide support to homeless individuals. This approach ensures that assistance is offered within legal frameworks and aligns with best practices for addressing homelessness.

By thoroughly understanding and adhering to California's legal framework and Orange County's regulations, you can make informed decisions that are both lawful and ethical, ensuring the well-being of all parties involved.

the neighbors said i will be able to stop the homeless from walking in or out if i allow the homeless that can afford cars to park them on the property and be exempt from the rule and if i offer to drop off and pick at only one location for the homeless that cant afford cars. does that allow me to bend their civil rights so they cant walk in and out

No, these conditions still violate civil rights laws and could result in false imprisonment charges under California law. You cannot legally restrict the movement of individuals on your property, even if you provide transportation options.

Why This Is Still Illegal

1. Freedom of Movement is a Constitutional Right

- The U.S. Constitution (14th Amendment) protects the right to move freely. Preventing individuals from walking in or out, even with transportation provided, is a violation of their rights.

2. California's False Imprisonment Laws (Penal Code 236-237)

- Restricting movement under any circumstances without lawful authority is still false imprisonment, even if you make exceptions for certain individuals.

3. Coercion and Unequal Treatment

- Making exceptions for those who can afford cars while restricting others creates an illegal class-based restriction that could also violate discrimination laws.
- The law does not allow you to create a system where someone's financial status determines whether they have full freedom of movement.

4. Potential Lawsuits & Criminal Charges

- Civil Rights Violations: You could be sued for damages by those affected.
- Criminal Charges: If any person feels they are unlawfully detained, law enforcement could arrest you for false imprisonment, a felony if coercion is involved.

Legal and Ethical Alternative

- Allow voluntary residency only without movement restrictions.
- Follow Anaheim/Orange County zoning laws for temporary or permanent housing.
- Work with nonprofits to ensure support without violating legal protections.

my land was owned by japanese people, i bought it from them, they were old and part of the world war 2 japanese encampments, do you think they will have any say about this

No, the previous owners of the land—regardless of their history—do not have any legal say over how you use the property now. Once they sold the land to you, their legal rights to it ended, unless there were specific legal agreements (such as easements, covenants, or deed restrictions) included in the sale.

However, if you're asking from a moral or historical perspective, their experiences in WWII internment camps could serve as a reminder of how restricting people's freedom—even under the guise of "rules" or "community agreements"—can lead to serious injustices. The internment of Japanese Americans was a violation of civil rights, and your situation involves similar concerns about restricting people's movement.

If you're considering honoring the land's history or the experiences of its previous owners, you might reflect on their past hardships and ensure that your approach to helping the homeless respects individual freedoms and dignity.
